America's First Factory Town

COMING NOVEMBER 15... New England's late 18th and early 19th century textile mills have long been seen as the originators of the American Industrial Revolution. Is it true? At this special event, noted architectural historian, Henry K. Sharp, presents his new research and book, America's First Factory Town which tells another story.

Sharp's groundbreaking research identifies the Patapsco Valley and the mid-Atlantic region as the epicenter of the industrial revolution which began a full generation before the textile mills of New England began production. This is a free event co-sponsored by Howard County Library System and the Howard County Historical Society. Books will be available for purchase and for signature. Space is limited and reservations are required.

An Historic Moment...

Work has begun on the BLOEDE DAM REMOVAL project with demolition scheduled to begin in summer 2018. Originally built in the early 1900s to supply electrical power to Catonsville, it was the first known instance of a submerged hydroelectric plant. The dam is hollow, forming a chamber or tunnel underneath the river bed and behind the spillway where the power plant was actually housed.

It has been described and illustrated in many scientific and engineering journals, and noted hydraulic engineers from all parts of the world noted it as one of the "wonders of progress in modern power development." The innovative dam generated power until 1924.

Pic Pick...

Recent developments along the Patapsco River's Grist Mill Trail may be shocking to this past resident of Catonsville who held 30 known patents, one of which was for an adhesive that gave him a decades-long commission to provide all the glue used for U.S. postage stamps. Locally, he may be better known for generating excitement by illuminating his neighbors. Be the first to shed a light on his name and we'll send you something special.
